

LILLIAN KOSOSKI DIES FOLLOWING AN OPERATION

Mrs. Anthony Kososki, aged 35 years, died in the Little Company of Mary hospital, Chicago, Tuesday morning following a major operation performed last Thursday.

Mrs. Kososki, nee Lillian Nikiel, was born in Poland July 18, 1902.

On June 17, 1922 she was united in marriage with Anthony Kososki. About eight years ago they moved from Spring Valley, Ill., to Tinley Park where Mr. Kososki was appointed Station Agent for the Rock Island railroad.

Mrs. Kososki was of a genial disposition and made a host of friends who are deeply grieved at her untimely and sudden demise.

Surviving are the husband, Anthony Kososki; one daughter, Genevieve; one son, Robert; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nikiel of Spring Valley; three sisters, Mrs. Henry Yaeger, Chicago; Mrs. Joseph Nowak, Granville, Ill.; Miss Jennie Nikiel and one brother, Albert Nikiel, both of Spring Valley.

The body laid in state in the Hirsch Funeral Home in Tinley Park from Wednesday evening to Thursday afternoon when it was removed to the home of the parents of the deceased in Spring Valley.

Funeral services were held Friday morning from the church of St. Paul and St. Peter in Spring Valley. Burial was made in the Spring Valley cemetery.

Large Array of Home Talent In Mokena Show

Practically all the home talent in Mokena will be seen and heard in "Ticklish Business" which will be presented Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, Feb. 23, 24 and 25 in the Mokena school auditorium.

The play which is being sponsored by the Mokena PTA, promises to be a smash hit. Chic Perkins-King who is directing the play, is astonished at the large amount of good talent to be found in Mokena. Rehearsals are going on apace and a great deal of interest has been aroused in the forthcoming production.

Junior Red Cross Units Meet At Joliet Y. M. C. A.

Student representatives of Junior Red Cross organizations from almost all Will County schools met Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the Joliet YMCA. Teachers and sponsors were present.

Miss Frances Delaney, assistant superintendent of Will County schools, Chairman of the Junior Red Cross, was in charge of the program.

Mr. Alex Zimmerman, director of music at the Joliet Township High school, lead the group in community singing.

Mrs. Olga F. Wilkey, executive secretary spoke on the safety program in which the Junior Red Cross is now engaged. She said that about 7000 children in 84 Will County schools are now enrolled in this program, which includes health, safety and first aid projects. She also thanked members for favors and menu covers they made at Christmas for service men and patients in Veteran's hospitals.

Miss Helen Nemeth presented two of her pupils, Jean Miller and Glena Paddock who read letters received from Junior Red Cross members in Maine, California, Connecticut and Canada. They also told of an exchange of scrapbooks which they are making with Juniors in Oakville, Tennessee.

Miss Gladys Leatherman showed the various uses of the Junior Red Cross Magazine in the classroom.

The resolution was made that the students form a Student Council. The first meeting of this council will be held early in March.

Members of the Junior Red Cross committee assisting Miss Delaney are: Mrs. Louise Bush of Lockport, Miss Edna Keith of Joliet, Miss Gladys Leatherman of Marley, Miss Helen Nemeth of Homer and Mr. Alvin Hill of Frankfort. The teachers from this vicinity present were: Miss Ruth Geuther of Mokena, Miss Gladys Leatherman of Marley, Miss Emily Anderson, Miss Helen Nemeth and Miss Evelyn Kopleman of Homer.

High School Students On Radio Program

Radio station, WBBM, in Chicago are sponsoring radio programs in which they salute cities located in Chicagoland. In that capacity, they will salute Joliet next Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

In preparing the program for that event the mobile air theater visited Joliet this past Monday at noon and in the music room of the Joliet high school made recordings of the capella choir, and a number of leading citizens in brief remarks. Mr. Ken Ellington of WBBM was the roving reporter in charge of the broadcast recordings.

Those of our students in this vicinity who sing in that choir are: Francis Gillette and Clara Bush of Marley, Dorothy Hall, Ada Semmler and Susan Bickley of Mokena and Merna Alexander of New Lenox.

New Home of New Lenox Couple Destroyed By Fire

Only eight days after Mr. and Mrs. Edward Berens of New Lenox had moved into their newly remodeled home, southwest of town, it was destroyed by fire, which happened early Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Berens were awakened before dawn by smoke and escaped in their night clothes.

The flames broke out in the basement, thought to have started from an overheated furnace. The house, which was a seven room frame building and all its contents, were burned to the ground. Nothing was saved. Mr. Berens estimates his loss at $3,500.

Singing Mouse Found In Basement In New Lenox On Exhibition

The singing mouse of Chicago which leaped to fame by way of the radio and the newspapers, is now in danger of losing its laurels inasmuch that another singing mouse has been found in New Lenox. One day last week a singing sound was heard in the basement of the Ray Brown home. Upon investigation a singing mouse was discovered and was caught bare handed by Oscar Ridgway who put the singing rodent in a cage and the mouse is still singing and has been the center of attraction for the villagers.

Filling Station Figures In A Daring Holdup

Last Saturday evening at 9 o'clock a daring hold-up was staged at the A. C. Haley Gas Station at Goodings Grove.

While the family and a neighbor boy were enjoying a game of cards, a car containing a shabbily dressed elderly man pulled up to the pumps and Mr. Haley promptly attended to his wants—3 gallons of gas. Then the man asked for cigarettes. Following Mr. Haley into the station, he quickly drew a gun and covered the son, Walter and ordered the others to remain quiet with hands up. He then forced Mr. Haley to hand him over the contents of the safe, which was about $16.

NEW LENOX BAND SPONSORS TWO AMATEUR NITES

New Lenox Grade School Band is sponsoring an Amateur Night in the school auditorium in New Lenox on Thursday and Friday, February 10 and 11 at 8 p. m. Three large cash awards are to be offered each night to the acts winning the most favor with the audience.

The program is under the direction of Miss Wilda A. Weaver of Chicago. Miss Weaver is well known in this section of Illinois, having been with WLS of Chicago for three years, and also having appeared with the Redpath and Loar Independent Chautauqua Systems as an entertainer.

Talent interested, please register or write to either Miss Weaver or Mr. Wight, bandmaster at New Lenox.

Music of all types is desired, plus tap dances and impersonations.

Make your plans early to see the big Amateur Night. Plans are being made to make this the biggest and most unusual Amateur Night ever held in this section.

Frankfort To Consider Plans of $25,000 Hall

The Frankfort village board at their meeting next Monday night is to consider plans for a new $25,000 community center building to house the village hall, fire department, jail and gym. The next move will be to secure federal aid for the project.

WPA Drops Non-Citizens

In compliance with a provision of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937, the Illinois Works Progress Administration has dropped 2,255 non-citizens from its rolls to date. 1,593, or considerably more than half the total for the state, were released in the Chicago area. WPA State administrator, Chas. E. Miner issued instructions that the Act be complied with promptly and completely but that no drastic measures be taken immediately against those workers about whose citizenship status there is reasonable doubt.

While the WPA has been dropping non-citizens from its payrolls, never the less, it is maintaining its classes in citizenship to help unnaturalized foreign born persons to become citizens. At the present time there are nearly six thousand unaturalized foreign born persons receiving instructions in the WPA citizenship classes throughout the state. Out of 1,038 "graduates" of these classes who recently took examinations for citizenship only 97 failed to pass. The 97 can, of course, return for more instruction and try their fortune another time.

Even those who pass the examination sometimes return to class. Joe DiBartolo attended a class in Will County until he received his citizenship papers. Then he stayed home and took care of the children while his wife, Pasqua, went to class. She liked the class so much that, after she received her papers, she continued her attendance. Joe had had ideas in that direction himself but the latest reports say that he is still home looking after the DiBartolo young ones while Pasqua attends the classes.

Hold Reception For Mokena Pastor

The Ladies Aid of Mokena M. E. church sponsored a reception last Friday night in the church, honoring their pastor, the Rev. Chas. Knight and his bride. They were presented a chest of silverware and a lovely pillow.

... W. S. VAN DYKE

The Man Who Has Been Entertaining People Since He Was Seven Years Old

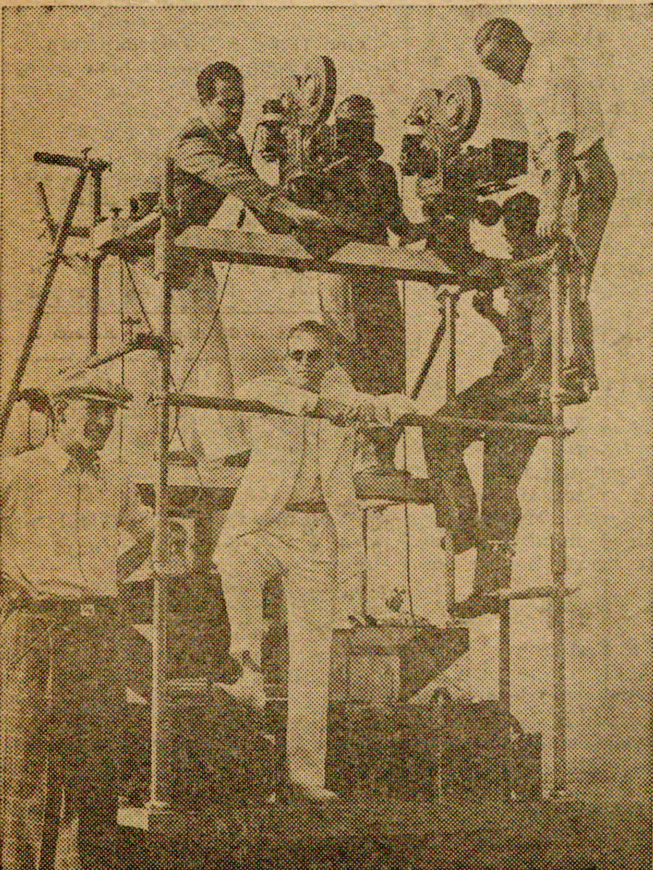

The son of a San Diego superior court judge, W. S. Van Dyke first appeared on the stage at the age of seven with Fred Butler and Charles Nichols in San Francisco. He's come a long way since, having directed such opposite type pictures as "Trader Horn" and "Rosalie." For his cinematic exploration work in "Trader Horn," "White Shadow" and "Eskimo" the Japanese government decorated Van Dyke with the Order of the Rising Sun. "Trader Horn" was an accomplishment, for he took a large company of white actors and technicians into darkest Africa and brought them all out alive. Like a ship's captain, Van Dyke directs everything about his motion picture sets. Below he is conferring with Cedric Gibbons, left, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer art director, and Charles Chick, center, general production manager, over last minute details of "Rosalie." Here is a day in Van Dyke's life.

FOTO-FEATURE

Director Van Dyke is six feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, has dark hair and blue eyes. He would rather act than direct, successful though he has been in the latter field. Golf is his hobby, but he must also work, so Van Dyke helps set nine cameras (below) to shoot an elaborate scene. Dressed in white suit with dark glasses, he seems unaware of the army of cameramen swarming about his shoulders.

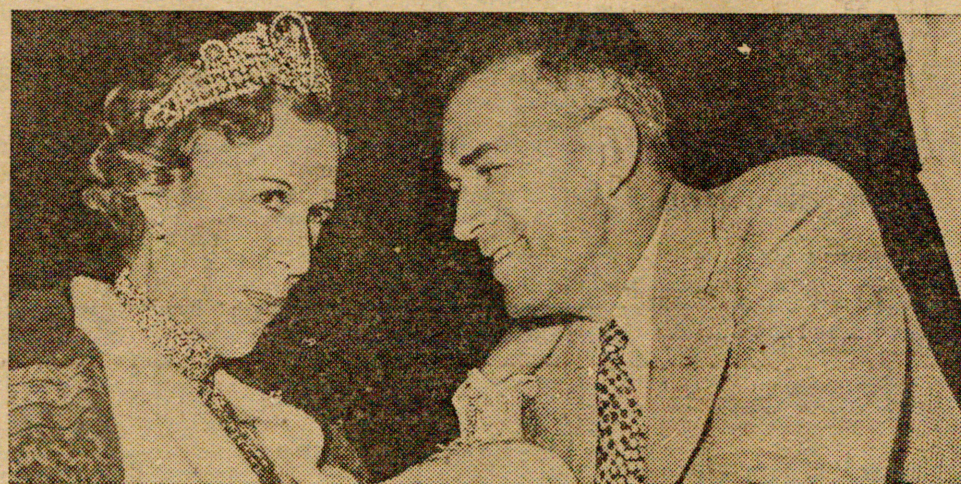

Van Dyke's favorite contemplative pose is with hand to chin or nose. Above he discusses a few more details of "Rosalie" with Nelson Eddy, the male star, and Herbert Stothart, musical director. Later, as filming starts on a mammoth dance sequence, he apparently thinks everything's going swell (right). It's seldom that a director can look so pleased.

Van Dyke, like most other good directors, feels that his players can't do a happy scene unless they're actually in a happy state of mind. Hence he must sometimes hide his own feelings when things aren't going right, giving an occasional pep talk to keep the ball rolling. Van Dyke must be a master craftsman, else he couldn't jump from African adventure stories to a musical romance and have each of them "click." Possibly he has an adept mind like his famous cousin, Henry Van Dyke, philosopher, writer and former U. S. ambassador to The Hague. He is also related to John C. Van Dyke, art critic who wrote "Art for Art's Sake," now professor of archeology at Rutledge college. Director Van Dyke may also believe in "art for art's sake," but his art must have box office appeal as well to please the producers. Evidently it does, for most Van Dyke pictures make money.

watches intently. These two pictures illustrate part of the director's endless job of coaxing, praising, scolding and wheedling. Stars often have reason to be discouraged. So does the director.

VAN DYKE STARS

From left to right, Myrna Loy, Rosalind Russell, Virginia Bruce and Joan Crawford, all of whom have acted under the Van Dyke banner at some point in their careers, all of whom think he's "the tops." Few people know that Van Dyke has been a miner, a lumberman and a newspaper reporter. Maybe that's why he knows people and why people like him. Experience is a great teacher.

Does a Big Job

Advertising of canned fruits and vegetables created demand, produced competition, made large and economical production possible, provided markets for the farmers and owners of orchards, and jobs for many thousands of people. The consumer profits by better quality and lower prices. Without advertising, these things could not have happened.

EASE YOUR CHILD'S CHEST COLD TONIGHT

Tonight, at bedtime, rub his little chest with stainless, snow-white Penetro. Penetro is the only salve that has a base of old-fashioned mutton suet together with 113% to 227% more medication than any other nationally sold cold salve. Creates thorough counter-irritant action that increases blood flow, stimulates body heat to ease the tightness and pressure. Vaporizing action helps to "open up" stuffy nasal passages. 35c jar contains twice 25c size. Ask for Penetro.

The Twilight

Laughter is day; sobriety is night; and a smile is the twilight that hovers gently between both, and more bewitching than either. —Henry Ward Beecher.

Feel Out-Of-Sorts?

La Crosse, Wis. — L. M. Lewistown, 2114 Charles St., says: "I did not feel right, had no pep, and my appetite was very poor. I didn't sleep well and felt generally out-of-sorts. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery certainly toned me up. My appetite improved. I slept better and I felt fine." Buy it in liquid or tablets at your drug store today. New size, tablets 50 cents.

No Comeback

Tramp (after hand-out)—Thanks, lady. Is there anything I can do by way of return? Housewife—Yes, don't.

CONSTIPATED?

To keep food waste soft and moving, many doctors recommend Nujol—because of its gentle, lubricating action.

HELP WANTED

"I want a man to do odd jobs about the house, run errands, one who never answers back, and is always ready to do my bidding," explained a lady to an applicant for a post in the household.

"You're looking for a husband, not a servant!" said the applicant.

"Miser" Paine

J. H. Paine was a composer and critic who was a friend of Frank Chickering's. It was generally supposed that Paine was poor. His name is associated with an experience which befell his benefactor, Chickering. To the latter Paine entrusted a package wrapped in a bandana handkerchief. Assuming that the content was manuscripts, Chickering placed the package in a safe. Seventeen years later the "impoverished" friend died. In the presence of Paine's legal representatives, the package was opened. It contained over $400,000 worth of bonds and currency.

ton February 11.

GARDEN CLUB NEWS

A hearty welcome and genuine hospitality awaited twenty Garden Club members in the home of Mrs.
John Swisher Tuesday afternoon.
The hostess accounted for the occasion with these lines:

I've always known that friends were
dear But as I older grow
It seems I want them nearer,
Because I love them so.
The things that make them happy
Pull at my heart strings too,
For friendship is like star-dust
That powders Heaven's blue.
The pressure of a friendly hand
Is as the dew to flowers
And oft times brings the sunlight
Into a darkened hour.
The avenue of life is long
And we can make it glad
By thinking of the joys we've shared Beause of friends we've had.

Of great interest to her guests, were the highlights of an extended trip through the south and Smokey mountain region from which she has recently returned with Mr. Swisher.
Autographs were written in the guest log, a facsimile of an early shingle setting forth the rules of an old inn:

"Four pence a night for bed
Six pence with supper
No more than five in bed
No boots to be worn in bed
Organ grinder sleep in wash house
No dogs allowed upstairs
No beer allowed in kitchen
No razor grinders or tinkers taken in."

Stopping over night at Georgetown immortal song so close to the heart of every American, My Old Ken-

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 30.

The Golden Text was, "We have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him" (1 John 4:16).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel: be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.
The Lord thy God in the midst of thee: he mightily: he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing" (Zephaniah 3:14, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also in-

JAMES C. BELL CANDIDATE FOR CO. TREASURER

Thousands of Will county citizens interested in the cause of good government will be pleased to learn of the announcement today that James C. Bell, prominent business man and civic leader of Joliet, will be a candidate at the April primaries on the Republican ticket for the nomination for the office of County Treasurer.

Mr. Bell was born in Joliet 37 years ago. He was educated in the public schools of Joliet and was graduated from the Joliet Township High School.

Returning from the World War after 27 months service with the Battle Fleet on the North Atlantic, he entered the University of Illinois where he was graduated in 1924 with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and Finance.

Mr. Bell, it will be recalled, was a candidate in 1934 in the Republican primaries for the United States Congress when he received one of the largest majorities ever given a candidate in Will county, having a plurality of nearly ten thousand votes over his nearest opponent.

He has been the active head of the James C. Bell Insurance Agency and District Manager of the Equitable Life Insurance Company of Iowa for the past twelve years. He has been prominently identified in civic affairs of Joliet and Will county for many years.

Republican forces have expressed the sentiment that Mr. Bell will be a strong candidate and feel that his nomination will add strength to the Republican ticket in the fall because of his sterling character, unusual fitness and the fact that he is a vigorous campaigner and is well known in all the districts of Will county.

Mr. Bell is the son of James A. Bell, former General Master Mechanic of the Illinois Steel Company, and he resides at 203 Hunter avenue with his two children, his wife having passed away two years ago.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Mrs. R. Fisher.

Lenea Hermanek is confined to bed with a very bad cold.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Becker were visitors in this community recently.

The Sylvester Tyler family have moved to a farm on the Sauk Trail in Cook county.

Lois Jean Fisher has returned to school after two weeks of illness.

We are all glad to see Mr. Gerald McLean up and around after a very serious automobile accident.

The christian workers of the Community Bible Sunday School wish to announce to the public of Lincoln Estates and community, the one and only reason that this Sunday school has been closed, is due to the use of the Ann Rutledge school being denied us for the use of religious services. Our average attendance for the month of December was 37.

Unless the residents of this community interested in the moral and christian living which a Sunday school teaches our children, work out a plan for a building of our own we will be without this needed training for this community.

We also wish to announce that we have a building site that was donated to us for this purpose, located on Lincoln highway, the money we now have in the treasury is available for this purpose, and anyone wishing to donate money or building material for a building, will be appreciated and thanked and we know that our Savior will bless you for your contribution. We also want to thank everyone who has helped in the past to make a success of the Sunday school.

Peter Sluiter is working for a food distributing concern operating out of Joliet.

Dr. Lou Davis who resides in Chicago spent the week end in her home here on 79th avenue.

When Nature goes on a Rampage

The telephone company is always prepared for emergencies. No one knows when Nature will crash down on our plant. It did this in January a year ago when a sleet storm, the worst in years, covered west central Illinois. In spite of the magnitude of the damage, the work of restoring telephone service proceeded swiftly and smoothly because the Illinois Bell Telephone Company has not only its own personnel and resources to call upon, but the personnel and resources of the entire Bell System. This working together of all units of a universal telephone system makes possible the dependable telephone service you know today.

seum in Fort Wayne, Indiana, showing the extreme contrasts that gave rise to the title, "The Big and Little Giants." Contrasts extended beyond height. Lincoln was lean—Douglas, heavy. The tall man had a high pitched voice, the short man a low pitched voice. Lincoln was a droll rural type while Douglas was a brisk urban figure. The Big Giant was born in the South but became the leader of the North. The Little Giant was born in the North but became the champion of the South.

Accelerating Corn Seedling Growth

In our last article on the relationship of seed corn kernel shape with quicker seedling growth and yield increase in our near by lake cool spring climate we covered the factors affecting first, the speed of germination and matter of seedling nutrition. We pointed out that speed of germination could be hastened by quick, thorough drying of the seed, as illustrated by sun drying immediately on picking; and also particularly advanced by an abundant supply of phosphorus in the soil where the seed was grown so that maturing processes would not only be more quickly consummated but an ample supply of phosphorus would be provided in the seed embryo to make the roots of the seedling. The need of close packing of the soil around the kernel to enable quick movement of capillary moisture from the soil particles to the kernel, which initiates the processes of germination, and that where soil is dry or lumpy packing with a roller would be helpful.

Under seedling nutrition we pointed out the good effect of plant food within the kernel upon which the seedling grown until its roots are established in the soil, and the advantage of this kernel plant food when the bacterial processes that make plant food obtainable from the soil may be slowed down or suspended by cold or the displacement of air from the soil through excessive rain or combination of both.

We further showed that the greatest amount of plant food for the least surface of the kernel was in the round spherical shape or more rounded shapes than the flat kernel, and hence the shape of the kernel was a factor in seedling growth. Further, that the greatest amount of endosperm (which is the interior of the kernel constituting the plant food) for the least amount of kernel surface exposure was in the more spherical shapes and proportionately in the more round as distinguished from the more flat and, therefore, the shape of the kernel (other things being equal, such as kernel weight, is worthy of consideration. Also that a normal shape of the pericarp or outer skin of the corn kernel is spherical but in kernel growth becomes flattened through side pressure of adjacent kernels and where this side pressure is absent, as on the ends of the ear or where adjacent kernels are missing through faulty pollination, that the kernels take the round shape.

DISEASE RESISTANCE

The 3rd group of factors is disease resistance. There are many kinds of soil bacteria, each of which perform various stages of the breakdown and transformation of plant food from one form to another. If we apply any sort of vegetative material, say for illustrations, ground grain to the soil, it could serve as a means of plant food, as the use of cotton seed meal (used in the south as a fertilizer) but plants can not feed directly off this vegetative organic material and not until it goes through many stages of breakdown thru the action of soil fungi and soil bacteria. The 1st stages are that of rotting, as wood rot or stems of straw or cornstalks rot in the soil. The 1st stage is the breakdown of cellulose and lignin (wood fiber) by soil fungi (molds that decay and rot these substances. These fungi are ever present and attack corn seedlings just like they attack bits of stalk and stem. Nature protects seeds, however, from this attack by a strong pericarp or outer coating which can absorb or take in water to germinate the plant and protect the substance within (endosperm) from fungi attack. It is a battle all seedlings have to go thru. Some are unscarred but many show the decreased vigor as a result of the attack, as human infants show the effects of disease attack not only in childhood but in later life. The less surface per unit of plant top (endosperm) that we expose to fungi in the corn kernel the less likely the seedling has to put up and the more of its energy and vigor can be applied to seedling growth, hence faster growth.

The type of pericarp tissue is also a big factor in resisting the attack and penetration of soil fungi. We can have the active condition of soil fungi, the mycelium stage and in their activities we refer to them as myceliae and this is distinguished from the spore stage. Active myceliae have the capacity to dissolve cellulose and lignin which constitutes the protective coating (pericarp) against disease attack and what we are interested in, is a pericarp covering on the corn kernel that can best resist this myceliae cellulose dissolving ability.

The resistance to any disease or invasion is the cell walls, not the cell protoplasm contents, and we know in all plant tissue grown that phosphorus is the element that makes hard cell wall structure. As the resistance to any invader, insect, etc., is the sum of the resistance of the cell walls, hence, it is vital that the seed be grown with an abundance of phosphorus. We further know the primary use of phosphorus in the maturing seed is the formation of the embryo and where there is a shortage of phosphorus, cell walls of the rest of the plant structure are robbed and made weaker in order to furnish the phosphorus needed in the embryo for reproduction, which is vital to the maintenance of the species. We see this in the ripening of small grain where robbery of the stalk and stem cell walls of their phosphorus to ripen the small grain so weakens the straw that the stalks bend over called lodging. It is frequent where manure is used which carries nitrogen out of balance with phosphorus. If we balance the manure with phosphorus we could have the additional growth without lodging. We see it again in the non-lodging cornstalk which has strong cell walls (because its root system is a high phosphorus gatherer) and this is one of the outstanding features of hybrid corn. It makes a stronger cell wall in the cornstalk which constitutes the strength of the stalk. It also makes stronger cell walls in the pericarp of the seed kernel that has to resist the mold fungi attack of the soil. Plants however cannot get phosphorus if it is not in the soil but where we have an abundance of phosphorus in the growth and maturing of the seed corn, we do not experience this cell wall robbery of the pericarp and consequently have the making of a better seedling. One might say, can we not overlook the advantage of abundant soil phosphorus opportunity when the seed was grown if we select the rounder shapes of kernels which have less surface. The type of pericarp tissue so influenced by abundant phosphorus has to do with degree of resistance, whereas the extent of the pericarp has to do with the quantity of attack and therefore, quantity of resistance needed. Consequently both are desirable though each may make up in part but not entirely for the absence of the other.

Power to Discharge the Army
In the year 1795 congress gave the President power to discharge the regular army whenever he saw fit to do so.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

The Band will sponsor a public card party in the school tonight. Refreshments will be served.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ulrich in Silver Cross hospital January 27. Mrs. Ulrich was the former Miss June Schmuhl.

A son was born January 27 to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Folkers of Joliet. Miss Dorothy Elsner of the U. of I. is spending a week's vacation with her parents here.

Mrs. Ella Lundt of Chicago is visiting in the Ferdinand Scheer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Vollrath and family spent Sunday in the Albert Stauffenberg home in Manteno.

A group of friends surprised Miss Lucille Topp on her birthday last Saturday, Jan. 29th. Pinocle was played and prizes were given to Virginia Warning, Janette Heuser, James Raffauf and Kenneth Oetter. Refreshments were served. The following guests were present: Corinne Krusemark, Wilma Kampe, Betty Vollrath, Virginia Warning, Katrina Priami, Georgia Mitchell, Jeanette Heuser, Annette Kohlhaugen, Grant Gauthier, James Raffauf, Kenneth Oetter, Warren Heuser, Robt. Elmsner, John Henry Weitendorf and Vernon Bobzin.

The Martha Sewing Circle of the St. Peter's Ev. church held their regular meeting February 3. They sewed on a quilt during the day.

The Ladies Aid of the St. Peter's Ev. church were well pleased with the support they received at their January supper. Watch for announcement for the treat they have in store for the February supper.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harnack is ill with scarlet fever.

Miss Lola Harnack, president of the Frankfort Public School Alumni will call a meeting soon of the workers who were requested to make a canvass of the members to raise funds for the society. She is hoping that all will be ready to respond.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kohlhaugen of Joliet called on relatives here Sunday.

Wilbur Kuester received a cut on his head while skating on the local pond Friday night.

NEW LENOX

By Dolores Walsh

Mr. Ellis O'Daniel, druggist, and past master of New Lenox was elected treasurer of the Will County Pharmaceutical association, at their annual meeting held Wednesday, January 12 at the Louis Joliet Hotel in Joliet where they held their annual election of officers.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Jay and children Junior and Patricia Ann motored to Warren, Wis. last Thursday night where they attended the funeral of Mrs. Steven Jay, grandmother of Mr. Jay. While there the Jays visited with several relatives and returned home late Sunday nite.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Sterling returned home at St. Louis, Mo. after visiting here with Mrs. Mary Bentley and Miss Caroline Bentley.

Mrs. James Tauber was hostess Thursday afternoon to members of her Pinocle club at her home in Brookwood subdivision. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. A. W. Walsh, Mrs. Fred Seivert and Mrs. Loretta Ridgeway. A traveling prize went to Mrs. Ridgeway. Mrs. Tauber will have the club in two weeks.

The St. Jude's Catholic Youth Organization will meet Monday night at their regular monthly meeting at the home of Miss Dolores Walsh.

Secure and Plant Thomson's Top-Yield Hybrid Seed Corn

FOR YOUR 1938 CORN CROP

IT IS THE ONLY HYBRID SEED CORN GROW IN YOUR VICINITY Where you can conveniently check up on adaptation and on the soil and field conditions under which it was grown. It had every soil advantage, including abundant phosphorus supply, of making the seed that will give you quickest germination, cold resistance, disease resistance, and fast vigorous seedling growth making possible better hill weed covering and ultimately greatest yields. THOMSON'S TOP-YIELD HYBRID SEED CORN is disease treated and graded into eighteen separate shapes and sizes enabling every farmer to have controlled hill count with any planter make. Secure it now for your 1938 planting.

MOKENA

The Mokena Band Parents Association held a party for themselves and the band members in the school Wednesday evening. The band played several numbers. It being the birthday of the president, Mr. Ira Gardner, a birthday cake with candles was in evidence and which afforded Mr. Gardner the pleasant opportunity of blowing the candles out, which it seemed, he was capable of doing. Refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cappel entertained the 500 club in their home last Saturday evening.

Miss Susan Bickley entertained at a luncheon in her home last Saturday afternoon. The guests were Miss Elizabeth Anderson of Joliet, Dorothy Hall and Ada Semmler.

Mrs. Anna Hirsch entertained the Eno bridge club of Mokena in her home in Tinley Park Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Eleanor Hall of Joliet well known in Mokena, returned Saturday to Cornell College at Mt. Vernon, Iowa to resume her studies which were interrupted last January when she received a fractured leg while coasting at College.

Mrs. Violet Whitlark entertained the bridge club Wednesday afternoon.

Wilbur Mancke figured in an automobile accident at the corner of Henderson ave., and Jackson street in Joliet Wednesday night. His car was quite badly damaged. No one was hurt.

Harold Spiess and family have moved into the home of the former's mother, the late Mrs. Peter Spiess.

The Wm. Martin Post 725 V. F. W. of the Lincoln Estates held a dance last Saturday night in the Hatch hall.

Miss Amelia Duncan observed her 86th birthday Thursday of this week. Her many friends extend congratulations to her on having attained this advanced life stone in her life's journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler and daughters, Miss Dorothy Hall and Mr. and Mrs. George Koeller attended the air show at the International Amphitheater in Chicago Sunday.

Lottie Holman O'Neill In Race For Representative

In announcing my candidacy for the office of State Representative, I realize that I and my work in Springfield are so well known that no extended comment is necessary. Most of the voters in this district know me but for the benefit of the uninformed I would suggest that in public life we are judged best by the friends we have made. The fact that I number among my friends leaders in the Labor, Farm, Educational and Civic fields, would indicate that in these various types of legislation my work has been satisfactory.

Certain issues which will be before the next session ought to be stressed at this time and the position of candidates defined. I refer to the important matter of centralization of governmental powers; and the taking from our local governing units the powers heretofore exercised by them. My support will be on the side of the local officials as I believe that is most satisfactory, both as to economy and efficiency. I particularly regard this as wise in the handling of relief and schools. Both of these functions are threatened.

Oppressive regulations of industry ought to be discouraged if we are going to get rid of the unemployment problem, it seems to me. Members of the legislature can do something about this if inclined and for that reason ought to define their position in the campaign.

The sales tax ought to be allowed to go back to two percent at the expiration of the three percent date. Also we ought to support a Constitutional amendment to do away with the sales tax on food and necessities.

As in the past I welcome an opportunity to meet with the voters for discussion on issues not mentioned in this article.

I urge all voters to go to the polls on Primary Day, April 12th.

I thank the people of the district for their confidence and courtesy in the past.

The Way To National Progress By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Recent news dispatches from Washington contain numerous promises that the "little fellows" in industrial and other activities are going to be consulted in current endeavors to clear the roadway toward sound recovery.

By this is meant that the average merchant or small producer and employer will have a chance to tell his story and outline his needs to the men who make and enforce the laws which control our well-being as a nation.

It's an excellent idea, which all Americans who feel a sincere concern with our national progress will approve. It could, with real benefit, be carried still further. It could, with real benefit, extend to all types of workers and producers, who compose the body and strength of our Republic.

Washington might, for example, consider the problem of the average wage-earner, who feels the toll that heavy taxes—direct and indirect—levy on the contents of his pay envelope.

It might, for example, consider the worries of the average insurance policyholder or other prudent saver, who wonders what effect huge public debts—with their constant threat of inflation—may have on the thoughtful provisions he makes for the future security of his family.

It might, for example, consider the situation of the housewife, struggling to provide balanced meals on a family budget constantly unbalanced by rising prices due to public extravagance and impractical economic experiments.

These are the people to consider, rather than the blatant pressure groups or the expert fishers for votes, whose voices appear so often to drown out the modest demands of the average worker and earner.

Yet it is on these average citizens that the strength and stability of America depend—today as in the past. They represent not only the thews and sinews of our country, but its hopes as well. It is they who built America and will carry it to still greater heights—if given a chance.

They are, moreover, the real voice of the Nation—and if Washington only hears that voice, America cannot fail to resume her progress.

Mokena Man Takes Part In Florida Resort Activities

Bradenton, Florida—This tropical haven for winter residents enjoying "The Friendly City's" noted year-round "shirt-sleeve" climate today neared the peak of its season with an unprecedented number of northern visitors.

Registrations at the Chamber of Commerce offices and memberships in the popular Tourist Club are running far ahead of last year, while the population of the Bradenton Trailer Park, operated under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club for its underprivileged children's fund, is nearly three times as great as it was during the previous season. The Park, dotted with royal palms and Australian pine* is official winter headquarters of the Automobile Tourists Association, an organization of trailer owners with a membership of approximately 20,000.

Tourist activities were in full swing this week, including fishing, boating, shuffleboard and lawn bowling at municipal open air recreation centers. Situated on the historic Manatee River, adjacent to five bays and only ten miles from the Gulf of Mexico, Bradenton is known as the center of one of the finest food and game fishing grounds in the South.

A number of social and sports events are scheduled for the current season. Included in this is the Fourth Annual Manatee River Regatta, which will draw crack professional amateur motorboat drivers from all sections of the country.

Mr. Charles F. Smith of Mokena is enjoying a most pleasant visit and is taking part in Bradenton's activities.

Power of Prayer

Our age suffers from a prejudice against prayer. Dr. Walter A. Maier declared Sunday in his coast to coast Lutheran Hour broadcast. He added that there are fewer and shorter prayers in many churches, a decline of family devotion in the home, and an organized anti-prayer program in certain circles of the "intelligentsia" that seeks to discredit prayer as "destructive to self reliance and conducive to superstition."

Dr. Maier asserted "no age should be more ready to accept the proved power of intercession; and belief that God can and does answer all prayer, harmonious with His divine requirement, than this generation which is seeing the introduction to wireless and radio, and the beginning of widespread research on telepathy. No fact of inner experience is more strongly attested and more widely indorsed than the fact that God answers prayer.

"Daily prayer is worth more than a post graduate course in applied ethics and contributes greater stimulus to practical happiness than a doctor's degree. Only a praying church can be a prevailing church! and one of the great and neglected tasks before American church bodies is to meet the divine requirement: "My house shall be a house of prayer" to teach people how to pray fervent, personal petitions."

BREVITIES

The home of Frank C. Shafer, owner of the Aurora Greenhouse company, Aurora, was swept by fire.

Arthur A. Bennett, sheriff of Du Page county, and Miss June Hewitt, both of Wheaton, were married in the home of the bride's parents.

State Senator Patrick J. Carroll, Democrat, who represented the Ninth district at Springfield for 28 years, died in his home in Chicago.

Police Chief Guy E. Donahue of Pekin announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Tazewell county sheriff.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Campbell, eighty and eighty-one years old, respectively, observed their sixty-first marriage anniversary at Penfield.

The Illinois Commerce Commission announced it had authorized five utility companies to construct and operate approximately 64 miles of rural electric lines in 25 counties.

A bust of the late Lorado Taft, famous Illinois sculptor, was unveiled on the University of Illinois campus at a meeting of the Illinois Art Extension committee.

Carl Hallgren, past grand commander of the Illinois Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, died at his home in Rock Island after 10 months illness of heart disease. He was fifty-three.

George W. Dowell of Duquoin, chief counsel for the Progressive Miners of America, indicated that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator at the April primary.

While his mother slept in a room across the hall, Jack Jones, twenty-three years old, shot and killed himself with a shotgun in his bedroom in Centralia. His father, W. C. Jones, told authorities the youth had been despondent.

Charged with passing two fraudulent checks totaling $20 while posing as a state milk inspector, William Wicks, forty years old, of Belvidere, was arrested and turned over to Winnebago county authorities.

The Very Reverend Francis J. O'Reilly, seventy-four, retired pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic church of Danville and former head of the deacons comprising Vermilion, Champaign, Iroquois and Piatt counties, died.

Ray Cook, former Christopher banker, has been elected president of the First National Bank of Zeigler. He succeeds Guy Hitt, who resigned to become vice president of the Federal Reserve bank of St. Louis. Cook had been receiver of the State bank at Mount Olive for several years.

The War department has ordered two officers of the Eighth Infantry Regiment, Illinois National Guard, to Fort Benning, Ga., for a special training course. They are First Lieut. Raymond Watkins, a student at John Marshall law school, and Second Lieut. George W. Rose, a former University of Illinois student.

Distinguishing between the right to strike and a conspiracy to prevent production, Federal Judge Fred L. Wham at East St. Louis ordered sixty-six members of the Progressive Mine Workers of America and seven locals of the union to pay $117,000 for damage caused by a long and bitter strike at a coal mine near Freeburg, Ill.

Hoopeston city officials moved to comply with a state sanitary water board order to end pollution of the north fork of Vermilion creek, through construction of a new sewage disposal plant. Issuance of a $45,000 bond issue to help finance the plant was authorized in a referendum.

The fire which destroyed the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson in St. Mary's road near Libertyville caused $45,000 damage to the interior and furnishings. It also burned a file of historical documents dating to the Seventeenth century. Mr. Stevenson, a Chicago lawyer and grandson of Adlai E. Stevenson, who was Vice President during the second term of Grover Cleveland, said the documents could not be replaced.

A publication possessing neither advertising nor circulation will be issued by senior students in the school of journalism of the University of Illinois during the second semester of the current school year. The printing laboratory of the school has been enlarged with the installation of a linotype and will be used as a publication plant for the paper. News stories will be supplied by students of advanced reporting classes under the supervision of faculty members. Copies for each member of the class will be printed to determine the degree of accuracy shown in student work.

Bonds of $30,000 were set for Eugene Conrad, an Alden farmer, after he was indicted by the McHenry county grand jury at Woodstock on a charge of arson. He is accused of setting fire to the house and barn on the Joseph Grivett farm, near Harvard, on October 23.

Discovering her pet fox terrier losing a battle with a red fox, Laura Ladden, seventeen years old, a farm girl living near Freeport, seized the fox and choked it to death. She collected a bounty of $2.50, the first woman in Stephenson county to do so.

Lesson for February 6

CHALLENGING THE SOCIAL ORDER

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:13-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I came not to call the righteous, but sinners—Mark 2:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Had Dinner With Matthew.
JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Passed By.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helping by Being Friendly.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Crusading for a Christian Society.

"Crusading for a Christian Society," is one of the topics assigned for consideration today. Everyone who is right thinking would be glad if the social order of which we are all a part might be made Christian, for it is far from it now. But foredoomed to failure are the attempts to Christianize society by some great program of "social regeneration." God's way is to save the individual who makes up the social order. When a man is right with God he will be right with his fellow man.

The Scripture lesson for today is full of outstanding spiritual principles of the greatest practical import to both Christians and the unconverted. It should be studied by the guidance of the Holy Spirit and taught in his power.

I. One Sinner Becomes a Servant (vv. 13, 14).

Capernaum was so situated that it provided an excellent location for the collection of the Roman taxes which the Jews so hated. There at the "receipt of custom" sat a Jew named Levi, who was no doubt despised by his neighbors because he had joined in this distasteful business. To him came the gracious Lord with the invitation, "Follow me." How different would be the history of the cause of Christ on earth if every other man who thus was called had done likewise. To follow the Master means sacrifice and breaking with the old life, but it also means peace and glory.

II. Many Sinners Meet the Lord (v. 15).

Levi, who now becomes Matthew, showed his love for the Lord by desiring that his friends might also meet him. So he prepared a dinner for them in his own house, to which he also invited Jesus.

It is always dangerous for a Christian to maintain social contact with his former companions in sin, if he does so for his own enjoyment or advantage. But to be their friends that one may win them to Christ, that is most desirable.

III. Some Righteous Folk Miss the Lord (vv. 16, 17).

Sin is an unspeakably horrible thing that separates men from God, but it is not an insuperable barrier, for the moment a man confesses his sin and calls on the Saviour he is saved. But self-righteousness—that is the impassable barrier. God can do nothing for the man who rests his hope of salvation on his own good character, high morality, and respectable position in society.

IV. Fasting and Feasting—When and Why (vv. 18-20).

God established one fast day for Israel. They established many, especially the Pharisees. Religion that loses its spiritual life and power clings with tenacity to outward observances and symbols.

Should one never fast? Yes, to the true follower of Jesus there come times when the urgency of soul concerning the problems of one's own life, the lives of others, the needs of the world, shuts the door of interest to anything as ordinary as food for the body.

Feasting and rejoicing—are these spiritual and uplifting? Christianity is a joyful faith. It is not to be hidden in damp, dark cloisters; it thrives in the sunshine, in the happy laughter of a child, in the cheerful shout of the saint. The Church is the Bride of Christ. If the friends of the bridegroom were to rejoice (v. 19), should not the Bride shout for joy?

V. New Things versus Old Things (vv. 21, 22).

The Pharisees wanted the gospel of grace to conform to the narrow channels of their interpretation of the law. Was not the law good? Yes. Jesus said he came not to destroy it, but to fulfill it (Matt. 5:17). He bore the curse of the law that we might be free (Gal. 3:13, 14). But he also brought in the new covenant of assurance and grace.

The mixing of grace and law, or the effort to do so, has continued even to our day. Let us be clear on that point—we are saved by grace, not by the works of the law (Eph. 2:8, 9). We work because we are saved, not in order to be saved.

Prayer

If the eye is fixed on God, thought may roam where it will without reverence, for every thought is then converted into a prayer.

Need Exercising

The only way to restore a weakened will is by exercising itself in details of duty.

Constant Joy

"Rejoice evermore," says the apostle; let your joy be constant and durable.

CALL RECRUITS

man and Doctor Wilbur is vice chairman of the National Anti-Syphilis Committee of the American Social Hygiene association. "Aided by state and city committees in many sectors, we expect to enlist broaden interest in the fight on syphilis and the conditions which favor its spread with a war fund of $500,000 contributed by volunteers," says Doctor Wilbur, who is also president of the association.

Several Colleges Join
War to Check Syphilis

Stimulated by the national campaign to control venereal disease, a few colleges and universities are making syphilis tests a part of the routine examinations required of incoming students. Judging from a survey made by the Chicago Tribune, serological diagnosis for syphilis is not a common regulation among student health services, however.

Instruction on the sexual and social hazards of the disease is far more common. Many universities, in fact, require their freshman men and women to take courses in health or hygiene revealing the character of the disease. Others confine this instruction to medical and sociological courses beyond the reach of most students.

University presidents, deans, and health directors questioned were unanimous in declaring that syphilis does not constitute a major health problem on American campuses.

Most of them agreed that students found to have syphilis and gonorrhea should be kept in school where they could have adequate treatment. Prep school leaders, dealing with younger boys, were just as certain that all syphilis should be barred.

The University of Chicago, University of Iowa, and Dartmouth college are schools which have elected to give Wasserman or Kahn tests to all newcomers. New York university offers free tests to all students, but does not require them.

Testing began on the Midway with the winter quarter this month, taking advantage of the Chicago board of health's program of free and secret examinations, since the university health service lacked funds for this purpose.

Dartmouth college began routine Wassermans last fall and found one case of congenital syphilis among 650 incoming students.

The University of Iowa started serological testing of freshmen in 1924 and continued until 1930, reported Dr. M. E. Barnes, head of the department of hygiene. It ceased, he said, because of many objections. The university then confined its testing to food handlers, employees, and others.

"Fid. Def." on British Coins

The title "Fidei Defensor" (Defender of the Faith) was conferred on the English King Henry VIII by Pope Leo X, in 1521. It was his recognition of Henry's reply to Martin Luther. When Henry quarreled with Rome, in 1533, the Pope then in power, Paul III, deprived him of this title. But in 1544 it was confirmed by the English parliament, and has ever since been borne by all British sovereigns. Now it refers to the Protestant faith, and not, as at first, to the Catholic religion.

Many Ladies' Man

EUGENE FIELD took special delight in tormenting Edward S. Bok, because Bok, who was a bachelor, was editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. That apparent inconsistency was amusing to the poet and humorist.

One day he inserted in the news columns of the Chicago Daily News a notice of Bok's engagement to Miss Lavinia Pinkham, granddaughter of Mrs. Lydia Pinkham of patent medicine fame. The story went out over the Associated Press and was reprinted in papers throughout the United States. A few days later there was a story about Miss Pinkham's departure for Paris to buy a trousseau.

Soon letters and inquiries began to pour in upon Bok, who pleaded with Field to put a stop to such stories. Field obliged him by printing a denial of the Pinkham engagement but at the same time linked Bok's name with that of Mrs. Frank Leslie. Again there was a flood of letters to the unfortunate editor of the Journal, also some caustic comment about the fickleness of his affections. Shortly afterwards Bok's engagement to the daughter of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Journal, was officially announced and Field was very contrite for the joke he had played on the Philadelphia editor.

But that didn't stop him playing jokes on Bok. His next was a fake interview "at quarantine" with Bok upon his return from a trip to Europe. Since the interview dealt with changes in women's fashions in Paris it was widely copied by fashion papers all over the country and it even fooled Bok's office in Philadelphia. The people there believed that he was still in Europe and there was much scurrying around to prepare for his arrival before they learned that it was another of Eugene Field's jokes.

John Wilkes Booth Mummy

IF, AT some county fair or in a "museum," you were told you could see the "mummified body of John Wilkes Booth" upon payment of a certain fee, it is to be hoped that you took advantage of the opportunity. For if you had, you would have gazed upon one of the greatest hoaxes in American history.

Around the turn of the century a house painter in Enid, Okla., known as John St. Helen (his real name was David E. George) convinced Finis L. Bates, a Tennessee lawyer, that he was in reality John Wilkes Booth. He asserted that he had escaped from the burning barn in Maryland a few days after the assassination of Lincoln, and now, struck with remorse over his deed, had to confess to ease his soul.

Bates tried to interest the United States government in his discovery, so he could collect the $100,000 reward offered for the slayer of Lincoln—this, despite the fact that that reward had long since been paid to the captors of Booth. But the federal authorities weren't interested.

In 1903 St. Helen (or George) committed suicide and the Tennessee lawyer claimed the body. In 1908 Bates published a book, "Escape and Suicide of John Wilkes Booth," to bolster up his claim. For a time the mummified body of his "Booth" was exhibited in Memphis, Tenn., and in 1929 it was said to have been sold "to parties in the West." Where it is now is unknown but wherever it may be, this is true: it is NOT the body of the man who killed Abraham Lincoln!

Wedding Story

DURING the winter of 1929-30, Robert Quillen, editor of the Fountain Inn (S. C.) Tribune printed a story about a wedding in his community which wasn't complimentary to either the bride or groom. As a climax, it insinuated that this had been a "shot gun wedding" and then added: "This may be the last issue of the Tribune but my life ambition has been to write up one wedding and tell the truth. Now that is done, death can have no sting."

This story was widely reprinted throughout the country, because many an editor, no doubt, had often wished to write just such a story and was glad to know that one of their number at last dared to do so. Some of them suspected that it was a fictitious yarn, but others believed it was genuine and criticized Quillen for "exposing and treating people so cruelly."

It was a hoax, all right, but it is still often reprinted as a real wedding story, perhaps the most famous one ever written.

Badminton

The name badminton was "poo-na" when first played in India, no one knows how long ago. English soldiers on leave carried it home and it was introduced by the Duke of Beaufort at his home, Badminton. Hence the name. Like tennis, it is played with rackets, but on a smaller court. Instead of a ball, a shuttlecock is used. This is shaped like an orange cut in half, has feathers imbedded in the flat side. The shuttlecock must be hit on the round side and while in the air.

Something for Everybody

SEW-YOUR-OWN spells economy and a better wardrobe for all the family, as these patterns indicate. You can sew at home during brisk winter days and have a new dress for all the family in no time at all and at very little expense. When you sew, you spend only a fraction of what you would usually pay for dresses of this character. Enlist the family's enthusiasm, and you can make winter days cheery for all of you by planning something new to wear.

For Big Sister.

A charming Princess frock on trim and tailored lines. Note that it buttons from neck to hem and that the waistline is belted to add a snug line. This is a young-looking dress with plenty of swish for the most fashion-knowing college girl. Make it up for Spring in thin wool, alpaca or print crepe. You'll like its clean-cut lines.

For Little Sister.

A copy of the popular Big Apple frock with the same flaring skirt, fitted basque and short, puffed sleeves. The dress that your little girl will adore wearing, for she likes these copy-cat fashions. Make it for Spring school days of chambray, percale or cotton broadcloth. For immediate wear, try it in serge or flannel. It is a dress that has flaring, graceful lines.

For Mother.

This slenderizing coat frock is one which you will find becoming and comfortable to wear. Designed on Princess lines with long surplice collar and two button closing at waistline, it is as easy to get into as a coat and as easy to wear. Make it up in rayon crepe, alpaca or one of the better cottons. You'll use it again and again throughout the coming season.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1347 is designed for sizes 14 to 42 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4 3/4 yards of 35 or 39 inch material plus 3/4 yard contrasting.

Pattern 1454 is designed for sizes 8 to 16 years. Size 10 years requires 2 1/2 yards of 35 or 39 inch material plus 1/2 yard contrasting for collar and cuffs.

Pattern 1448 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 5 1/2 yards of 35 or 39 inch material plus 3/4 yard contrasting.

CHEST COLDS

Relieve Their Misery
This Proved Way

WHEN there's a cold to treat—especially if it's a chest cold—there's no time to experiment. Relieve the misery with the treatment that has been doubly proved for you.

Here's What To Do: It's best to stay in bed and get lots of rest. Eat lightly, drink plenty of water, and keep elimination regular. And use your dependable Vicks VapoRub without delay.

VapoRub has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

VapoRub is direct external treatment. No "dosing"—no stomach upsets. Just massage it on throat, chest, and back. Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to Begin...

Almost before you finish rubbing, you begin to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break local congestion. And long after restless sleep comes, VapoRub keeps on working.

CHAPTER XI

Dirk went to bed in the grip of a mild elation which made it difficult to distinguish between sleep and dreams. He awoke to a sense of commotion. A messenger was having trouble rousing Leonardo from much-needed sleep and presently the two of them were closeted with Don Jorge. Arnaldo joined Dirk at coffee and told him what was up: Dorado was doing his stuff two hours earlier than usual. The next moment Senor Maximiliano and his companions came out and started for the northeastern bastion. Dirk and Adan hurried to their rooms, Adan to get a pair of binoculars and Dirk to fetch his Springfield. They caught up with Don Jorge and his party while the blind man was still groping his way up the turret stairs.

Emerging into the glare of the morning sun Leonardo's glance fell on Dirk's rifle and immediately turned moist with envy. He caressed the blue-black barrel as though he touched a woman's cheek, then looked up pleadingly. Dirk laughed, let him test the gun for balance, but promptly took it back again.

Arrived beside the bastion, Arnaldo leaned against it and focused his field-glasses on a slowly moving pillar of dust. Presently the horsemen strung out along a ledge of rocky soil and he could count them. "Three more than yesterday," he announced.

"And four more yesterday than the day before," muttered Leonardo.

"If that's so," said Don Jorge, "Dorado must have escaped with more cash than I thought. As long as it holds out his troop will continue to grow."

"Do they always ride on the other side of the barranca?" asked Dirk. "Of course," answered two voices at once.

"Why?"

"For the same reason we would be fools not to stay on this side," said Don Jorge. "The barranca is a barrier that runs for 20 miles. A child would have more sense than to lay himself open to getting trapped with an impassable ditch at his back."

"It was a stupid question," said Dirk, "but since we have plenty of time let me ask another. What's the sense of the daily ride? What does Dorado get out of it?"

"The tactical idea," said Don Jorge patiently, "is to intercept both reinforcements and escape. Incidentally Pepe wouldn't be averse to plunder in the way of ransom."

"He's holding a package now," murmured Arnaldo.

"What package?" asked Don Jorge quickly.

"Yesterday I watched him capture a gringo by the name of Blackadder."

"Blackadder!" cried Dirk. "Why, Blackadder?" He stopped and caught his breath. "Blackadder is the name of Miss Sewell's stepfather!" Glancing around he saw a rough table and two rusted iron chairs. He pushed the table so it stood end on against the parapet which was several inches higher. "How far are they?" he asked.

"What are you doing?" said Arnaldo, looking down. "Never mind what I'm doing," said Dirk. "How far off are they?"

"Between one and two kilometers, senior," answered Leonardo mournfully.

"Eight kilometers make five miles," calculated Dirk aloud. "Leonardo, when you're sure they're under a thousand meters, sing out. What about it, Adan—can you spot Dorado? Is he riding at the head?"

"I'll tell you in a minute," said Adan, only half interested. "There's a bunch of three in the lead and I think he's on the alazon. Yes, that's Pepe: he's riding the big sorrel."

Dirk gauged the wind, set his sights for a thousand yards, loaded his rifle and stretched out, face down, on the table. Not wishing to scratch the barrel he made a wad of his felt hat and fixed it for a rest in the angle made by the parapet with the bastion.

"Don't forget, Leonardo; the minute you're sure they're under a kilometer."

"What's the use?" said Leonardo gloomily. "They won't come within range."

"Never mind about that," said Dirk sharply. "You do as I say."

Several minutes elapsed before Leonardo murmured, "When they come to the first row of the maguay plantation it will be only 800 meters and they will turn."

"Damn!" muttered Dirk but promptly relaxed all his muscles, drew a long slow breath and held it.

His cheek caressed the smooth oiled oak of the stock, his fingers closed on the rough grips. Taking a full breath, he fired. The bullet sang the high song of a bullet that finds no mark. A second can seem long, sometimes it can be divided into sections. An age after Leonardo had given up hope of a possible ricochet which by a miracle might hit Dorado on the bounce a puff of dust came back at his astonished eyes from far beyond the riders. While amazement still paralyzed his vocal chords he saw every horse sink on its haunches and come to a slithering stop. It was what Dirk had planned. In that instant of suspended movement he drew the foresight down to the vanishing point, steadied and fired again. There came the answering thud of a hit. Dorado's big sorrel squatted, rushed from under his rider and fell dead. "I missed him!" groaned Dirk. "I killed the horse!"

Joyce came racing along the esplanade. "Who did that?" she asked angrily. "Who fired that shot?"

Already Dorado had been swept up by two of his followers and the whole troop was riding away at a gallop; behind remained the still mound of the sorrel, a dark monument suddenly erected against the shimmering gold of the desert. Dirk rolled over and sat up.

"I did."

"You're a butcher!" cried Joyce, her eyes blazing. "You come to my house, an uninvited guest, and amuse yourself by shooting horses!"

Dirk's cheeks flushed with anger. "The man out there shot me up

Joyce and Adan Were Nowhere to Be Seen.

without the slightest provocation; why shouldn't I pay him back in his own coin?"

"But you didn't hit him," cried Joyce, "you shot a horse—you killed a poor horse."

"What bunk!" intervened Arnaldo, lowering his field-glasses. "For one thing I'm sure he did hit Dorado though it may have been only through the leg. Add to that he just missed freeing you of all your troubles and has a bomb-proof alibi besides—shooting at a bandit who's holding an American for ransom. Bunk to you and the dead horse!"

"What American?" asked Joyce, her attention seized.

"Man named Blackadder," said Dirk. "Ever hear of him?"

"Blackadder!" gasped Joyce. "Mr. Helm Blackadder? Why—"

"I've thought of one more for the list!" interrupted Arnaldo excitedly, laying an affectionate hand on Dirk's shoulder. "He's lifted the siege. You, he, and I—for a day or two anyway—we can go anywhere."

He turned to Leonardo. "What's become of Dorado's silver-plated car?"

"It's in Toluca where he always sent it," explained Leonardo, "to save the time it takes to drive around the barranca."

"So," said Adan. "We can go whenever we like—on foot or a horse."

Don Jorge lifted his chin. "Leonardo?"

"Senior."

"Tell all the men they can take a six hours' sleep and the women to prepare a big feed for them when they wake. Open the gates and let the children go out to round up whatever small stock was left outside. As for you, Adan, give a blind man your arm; I want to have a talk with you."

Dirk was left alone with Joyce. "Fine kettle of fish," he muttered.

"Now that I've fixed things so we could go for a gallop on the hunters—perhaps even jump them—you have to be sore! How long does it take you to snap out of a grouch?"

"I'm out now," said Joyce, cheeks and eyes already alight with anticipation. "Come along."

Ten minutes later, with the help of Tobalito, he had saddled the hunters and was ready to give her a leg up. He faced her and spoke gravely.

"Listen, this horse is called Tronido and that one's Rayo. Do those names mean anything to you?"

"Thunder and Lightning," said Joyce. "Are you trying to frighten me?"

"No; only fill you with sense before we start. You're going to ride Rayo because he's a shade lighter and not so touchy in the mouth. If you do what I say, you'll be all right; if you don't you may break a neck—the horse's or yours."

"I'll be good," said Joyce, impressed by his earnestness. "What are your orders?"

"Walk a mannered horse for half a mile," said Dirk, "and you can do anything with him; start him off with a rush and he'll ride your arms out of their sockets. So we're going to take them away slow."

As they passed through the great gate there was a bit of prancing and champing on the bit but with soothing words and a light hand Dirk coaxed Tronido back into a walk and a moment later Joyce persuaded Rayo to follow suit. They rode along the faint trail, scarcely used save by ox-carts, which provided the sole access for cars to the hacienda. The road meandered more or less parallel to the barranca which widened by almost imperceptible gradations the farther they went. At last Dirk permitted a trot and turned amused eyes on Joyce. To his amazement she took it quite easily, leaned to it, caught its rhythm and laughed a happy laugh.

"Oh, Dirk!"

"Joyce!"

On the same impulse they slowed the horses again and stared at each other. "That was funny," said Joyce.

"Wasn't it?" agreed Dirk.

He urged Tronido into a trot, then lifted him into an easy canter and held him there. "How are you making it?" he asked.

"Fine," said Joyce, "but you tell me."

"Ease your back a bit and sit into the saddle. That's the stuff. Are you game for a gallop while we're still headed away from home?"

"Go ahead," said Joyce, and they did.

The horse under her seemed to flatten out. No jouncing up and down, no swerving from a straight line—only the feel of mighty muscles rippling rhythmically.

They rode back more slowly and as they approached the hacienda she turned on him a face so glowing he felt his heart skip a beat and then do three in one.

"Well?" she asked.

"Do you want to know the truth?"

"The whole truth."

"I thought it would take you a month to learn what you already know." He jumped off, handed her his reins to hold, tore down a high bean pole and laid it like a bar between two maguay plants. "Made to order," he commented as he mounted. "Watch me, then do exactly the same. Just stick on and leave the rest to Rayo."

She jumped the bar—once with a gasp of astonishment at her success, then ten times more with steadily increasing confidence and improving style. She would have been content to keep on for the rest of the day had not Dirk taken his revenge.

"If you don't let up," he remarked dryly, "you're going to find out there are more ways than one of killing a horse."

After an afternoon spent in grooming the horses for sheer love of the work he came to dinner aglow from what he called an earned bath. Already he regretted having brought no change beyond a single lounge suit but tonight Arnaldo, save for shoulders exaggerated beyond nature and a wasp-like waist, was dressed in like manner. Joyce had put on black—not the semi-evening frock of her first and last appearance at El Tenebroso, but it had an equal simplicity of line that gave her an almost sculptural appearance. Changing her clothes had changed her mood. Gracious and ready with her answers she yet was so distraught as to give an impression of inner stillness. Though she avoided looking directly at Dirk and Adan she was thinking of them, but thinking more of herself. What had come over her last night? Which person was she—the woman of no age who had been kissed and had kissed back, or the girl who had sat shoulder to shoulder on the parapet with a companion to whom she had poured out her heart as though she talked to another self? Were there fibers within her that responded to music alone and others that reverberated solely to the sidereal harmony of moon, planet and star? She wondered.

Dirk was engrossed in a masterly discussion of agrarianism between Don Jorge and Arnaldo. Fresh from the capital, Adan was packed to the gills with theory and regarded the parceling out of all the land in the republic as an ultimate panacea for every ill. Don Jorge, rooted in the soil, aware of its divergence and as close to the peon as he was to his tight-fitting charro breeches, admitted the cure only to damn it with a qualifying phrase—"in a thousand years."

"You can't overleap education the way you vault a mangy horse," he exploded. "You'd have to have a mildly educated peon, but first catch your educated executive—if you can. It isn't enough for a ruler to be honest, altruistic and stuffed with beneficent theories. Unless he's greater than God he can't bridge the gulf of ignorance, between a peon and a tractor, nor grow enough gramma grass on a hundred hectares to give that peon's babies milk, nor change the sweep of wheat lands into lush bottoms crammed with garden truck. You agrarians run around with a foot-rule yelling, 'Behold the measure of all things!' You can measure a back yard with a footrule, but not a prairie. Our campesinos, dumb as they are, can see that. Do you know what they're saying?"

"No," said Adan smilingly, for he loved discussion for the talk's sake alone. "Tell me."

"They've heard what happened in the north and they're giving it out they'll do the same here."

"What's that?" asked Dirk.

"Crop the ears off any agrarians who set foot on La Barranca. They'll do it too, for though the peon has no education he has his backlog of fundamental knowledge. He doesn't have to starve to death to see starvation on the way any more than he had to learn to read and write before he could make up his mind the three model houses put up by my master and friend, Cutler Sewell, were no good."

Joyce looked up. "Why weren't they? I've always wondered."

"Because your father's education led him into the belief three rooms are better than one, while the peon's backlog of knowledge has taught him one room is infinitely better than three since the sum of the warmth of his kitchen fire, his milch goat, his wife, six children and a couple of pigs constitutes, at no expense, exactly the sort of central heating system which is slowly making England a livable country."

They laughed, rose and separated; it was already late, there was no need tonight to make the rounds.

How does a girl, lacking long social training and apparently innocent of finesse, leave one man in the lurch and walk off with another without either of them knowing how it happened? Dirk paused to ask Don Jorge a single unimportant question, but when he stepped out on the balcony Joyce and Adan were nowhere to be seen. He walked to the right hopefully until turning the angle opened a long empty vista.

Precision of Gravitation Allows Man to Live Here Precariously, Writer Says

Has the thought occurred to you that there might be a time when summer never will come again?

We are accustomed to think of our ordinary seasonal variations in temperature as being of considerable magnitude. To us 100 degrees Fahrenheit is unbearably hot; 30 degrees below zero insufferably cold. When either of these temperatures is reached, according to Donald B. Harris, in the Coronet, we feel that nature must be exerting herself strenuously, in order to make us uncomfortable.

In order to get even a faint idea of how critical our temperature adjustment is, we must imagine a very large heat regulator with a dial 14 inches long. One end of this dial is 454 degrees below zero, 1,800,000 degrees above zero the other. Then the normal terrestrial range of temperature is represented by a line on the dial, narrower than the thickness of the thinnest piece of paper. If we are to maintain temperatures on earth as they are today, the pointer must be set squarely in the center of this line; if it is moved to one side or the other by even so much as the thickness of a hair, average temperatures on earth will either drop far below freezing, or rise above the boiling point of water.

It is literally true that all life on earth is "hanging by a thread," the thread of gravitation which links us to the sun, and holds the earth within the beneficent sphere of its radiation. If this thread should break, or if it should stretch ever so slightly, or contract, even by the smallest amount, temperature conditions would so change on earth that we would all immediately freeze to death, or perish in a horror of suffocation and flame.

The weight of paper currency varies as much as 5 per cent. The blank paper varies slightly. New plates carry more ink than worn plates. The moisture content, too, varies with the condition of the atmosphere.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Curtaining Your Front Door.

YOUR front door greets your friends before you do. Is it dressed to look its best? Here are some simple rules that will be useful in selecting the material and style for front door curtaining.

Choose a fabric that looks well on both sides and that harmonizes with the outside color of your door as well as with the color scheme of the hall or room into which it opens. A simple net curtain material or plain silk are good to use but if your door is white on the outside think twice before you choose the usual ecru or pongee color. White net or silk of a color to match the shutters or the trim of the house will look infinitely more attractive and will not be too conspicuous. The curtains may be made double with a different color on the inside if need be. Pale yellow is another color that is always safe to use as it gives the effect of light shining through the door.

These curtains should be firmly anchored both top and bottom so that they do not blow about and catch in the door when it is opened and closed. Both bottom and top rods may be fastened over hooks as shown here at A.

Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

2-WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing . . . and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

TIPS to Gardeners

Start Them Indoors

TOMATO, cabbage, broccoli, egg plant and pepper crops usually prove more satisfactory when they are started indoors from seed. The gardener thus may use seed of a known variety from a dependable source.

About eight weeks before plants are to be set in open, sow seeds a quarter-inch deep in good soil in a regular florist's flat. Water thoroughly but not too frequently—preferably on bright days.

Good sunlight and good air circulation are important in preventing "damping off." Keep temperature fairly even at 70 to 75 degrees. When young plants are about one and one-half inches tall, transplant to a larger box or cold frame, spacing about three inches apart.

If the plants are grown in a box, place them indoors in the shade on six or eight mild days to harden them off. When plants are set in open soil, space them far enough apart to allow for full development.

Keep your body free of accumulated waste, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. 60 Pellets 30 cents.—Adv.

IT'S IN THE NEWS! There are two classes of news in these columns every week: (1) Interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) the advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are news, and in many ways the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

● A new and better method of refrigeration is devised—and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever—again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing—and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products—he advertises to tell you about the savings.

● You'll find that it pays to follow this news every week. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world . . . to learn of new comforts and conveniences . . . to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.
